International Day for Care and Support

The United Nations General Assembly, in an innovative resolution declared October 29 as International Day of Care and Support. The resolution encourages Member States, the United Nations system, civil society, the commercial sector, academia, and the general public to observe the worldwide day on an annual basis. It recognizes the unequal burden of unpaid care and domestic work on women and girls and emphasizes the importance of addressing these systemic impediments to women's empowerment. As a result, the United Nations has designated this day to promote awareness, strengthen legislation, and increase investments to transform the care economy and advance gender equality.

FHTS commemorated International Day for Care and Support on 30th October 2023 at Delhi office with an objective to raise awareness, improve policies, and scale up investments to transform the care economy and advance gender equality.
